Coming to Their Senses.

In a speech delivered in Buffalo, Lieutenant Holton left in a new light on the naval situation by declaring that the names of Dewey, Sampson and Schley will live together in American history.

The pity is that the friends of Admiral Sampson did not take this cue at first. There never was a disposition to do injustice to any officer of the navy by the people. When the war with Spain opened, the navy of the United States was as a sealed book to the people at large. Never before was preference so open to merit as upon that occasion. When from the far east an unsuspected victory was flashed from the wires the people stood ready to do full honor to the man who stood upon the bridge upon that momentous occasion. The same was true when later developments were looked for from the West India squadron. It was not known that the board of strategy had taken the possibilities of that campaign out of the hands of Providence for the purpose of crowning a certain favorite, regardless of the fact whether he was present in the engagement or not. It was against the plain purpose to do injustice to a gallant officer that the people protested. They knew that Sampson was not in the engagement, that Schley was, and that he was the ranking officer, and that under all previous rules a victory was ascribed to the man in active command. It will not do to say that the plan of battle had been arranged by another. Under such a rule Admiral Crowsfield, although a thousand miles away, might have claimed the victory for himself under the plea that he had pulled the strings.

It is altogether likely that in the effort to rebuke the assumption of Admiral Sampson, in claiming that victory did not belong to him, that he has failed to receive justice for what he really deserved. In such a case, Lieutenant Holton has opened the way for a review of the whole question by admitting that Admiral Schley did hold a place of honor in the engagement and that there are three names worthy of remembrance in connection with the war.—Atlanta Constitution.

Crows Fight a Blacksnake.
A desperate encounter between two crows and a big blacksnake was witnessed near Hancock by Edward McCordell, says the Index-Democrat. The snake had eaten the eggs from the crows' nest in the top of a tall tree, and here the fight began, continuing after the snake had dropped to the ground. McCordell's attention had been attracted to the unusual flutter, accompanied by cawing and hissing. One crow engaged the reptile at the head and one at the tail. They would alternate positions and very little point of attack was the snake's eye.

McCordell stood at a short range, and finding the snake getting the better of his feathered antagonist, advanced with a club to kill it. The snake sprang at him after standing all night on its tail, but he succeeded in killing it. The eyes and head of the snake had been much lacerated by the crows.

The snake was four feet ten inches long. Mr. McCordell took it home with him, and will have the skin tanned for a belt.

There is Room for All.
The colleges of the land are now turning out hundreds of young men, many of whom will be heard from, declaring that there is no room for them in the world of business. The first flash of boyish enthusiasm must give way to the feeling that the man would succeed must fight his way through unexpected adversities.

It is to this class of men that the president of one of the leading banks of Chicago addressed himself a few days ago upon filling an appointment to appear before a graduating class. "Do not imagine," said he, "that the good positions are all filled, the fortunes all made, the success all achieved." The speaker knew that the young men before him were filled with high hope, and that there among them those who, failing to be measured up to their own valuation at first, would be overwhelmed by disappointment, and doped might give up the race at once. To them he felt that the best possible hope was the statement that success has to be won in the same old way, and that only the man bringing into play the strongest qualities of perseverance could hope to succeed.

A college education does not bring instant success, any indeed, does it bring success at all. It better fits the young man for the effort that is before him. His father, poorly equipped and handicapped by the want of an education, achieved a certain success, of which the son should be duly proud. The young man starts in life better equipped, and with the rough places smoothed down, but still he has to tread the road his father trod, having courage, perseverance and integrity.

Thus armed for the battle of life, the young man should not misunderstand the situation. The road to success is as broad to him as it was to his father, and the need for leaders is felt by each succeeding generation. In time the leaders of today will drop by the wayside, and their places must be taken up by those who have qualified for the work. It is in this preparation that the young man must make himself felt. For years he may have to occupy a back place, where he seems to get no credit for what he is doing. But if he is wise, he will find that his patience has a good investment and that when fortune smiles upon him he will be qualified to fulfill whatever duties may be imposed upon him.

The best lesson that the young man can propose to himself is that there is as much room for him as there was for the men who preceded him, and as a consequence a determination to keep himself ready for whatever happens.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Modern Farm.

The editor of the Graphic lays no claim to being much of a farmer, though he was reared in the country, but while this is the case we believe we know good farming when we see it. We have contended that farming is a profession just as much as the law or any of the other callings that engage the attention of men. Men fail at the other professions, simply because they have gone into the wrong calling of life. So it is with farming.

There are thousands of men on the farm who understand nothing in the world of the cultivation of crops, they know nothing of the soil, they know nothing of their business, and as a result they are failures. The man who expects the earth to produce most understood how to make the land do its part, while he is engaged in his part of the work. In fact old mother earth is always willing to do her part if man will act intelligently in bringing about these results.

These remarks are brought forth by a recent visit to the model farm of Mr. William Riggins. A few years ago he bought about fifty acres of land just outside the corporate limits of Madisonville. The land was regarded as rather poor and not very productive, but Mr. Riggins knew what was in the soil and also what was lacking. He built a nice residence on a knoll of ground and from his front door can see the city. After he built his home, then he commenced to lay off and improve his land. He bought fruit trees of all kinds, that is of all good kinds. These were set out and now they are in bearing.

He has apples, pears, peaches, cherries and other kinds. There are acres of these trees and they have been bearing for the past year or two. This season they are full of fruit. In addition to this, he has strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, in fact berries of all kinds. His strawberries this year are fine and in a few days the raspberries will be ready for the market. He had it so arranged that from the time the first berries come in that he will have a succession of berries for at least two months. His apples will begin this month to ripen and there will be a succession until the season is over.

There is not a foot of ground that is not made to yield something. If there are a few feet below rows that seem otherwise to be idle, potatoes are planted there, or if not something else equally as valuable. Fertilizers are used and every means are employed to get a good yield. Another thing potatoes are permitted to grow on that farm. As soon as a weed shows at its head above the ground, it is at once pulled up by the roots.

It was our pleasure to visit this farm a few days since, and it was a pleasure that we shall not soon forget. It is just such a farm as we should like to own. It made us feel almost dissatisfied with being an editor. Good farming pays. Mr. Riggins makes it pay and other men who till the soil would do well to take a few lessons from him in farming.—Glenn's Graphic.

Abandoned.
Congressman Richardson, of Tennessee puts his finger on a very sore spot of our national body politic when he calls attention to the peril now confronting and menacing the Monroe Doctrine as the result of American imperialist policies.

It is undoubtedly true that we can no longer consistently forbid the interference of Europe in the affairs of the Western Hemisphere, nor can we renege a foreign acquisition of territory in our half of the world. The basis of the Monroe Doctrine was necessarily found in our refraining from interference in European affairs and from the acquisition of territory in the Eastern Hemisphere. We have ourselves destroyed this foundation, and the Monroe Doctrine falls shattered because of that destruction.

There is at the present moment an uneasy belief in the minds of the administration chiefs in Washington that Europe is contemplating action which shall serve notice on us that the Monroe Doctrine is no longer regarded as being in force. It is said that sever at foreign Governments are making plans for the establishment of coaling stations in the promontories of South and Central American ports. Germany's colonial work in Brazil is causing the grave anxiety to our Government. There is every reason to believe that Europe's announcement of disregard for the Monroe Doctrine will be definitely made in the near future.

And when this announcement comes what will be our argument in reply? We cannot demand of European Governments that they shall still remain bound by an American doctrine which no longer binds the American Government. We cannot rigidly command Europe to keep hands off the Western Hemisphere when we have ourselves laid violent hand on large territory in the Eastern Hemisphere. We will be in the wrong in such a controversy. We have been in the right, heretofore, because we held to our part of a doctrine forbidding European expansion in our direction. All we can do now is to declare war on Europe in support of our determination to remain supreme in the Western Hemisphere. This existence or menace of war will never be ended hereafter. And for what do we pay a price so appalling in its meaning of the waste of American blood and treasure? For a miserable group of islands in the Orient, inhabited by some 5,000,000 Malays, who will fight against us for generation after generation until we have exterminated them from the face of the earth. Our present position represents the most stupendous folly known in the history of nations.—St. Louis Republic.

In a New Role.
A Washington Telegram says that Henry E. Yost, serving a life term for complicity in the assassination of Gov. Goebel, was yesterday granted a patent on an extension car. It is supposed that he perfected his patent while a prisoner at the county jail.

The granting of the patent explains much that was mysterious while Yost was in jail. Several of the turnkeys at the county jail say his busy engagement with paper, pencil and drawing implements on several occasions, but Yost always hid them at their approach.

Though his imprisonment he was kept in No. 9, an apartment set aside for moonshiners and other government prisoners. In the early fall, before the session of the federal court, he and Jim Howard were the only prisoners in that part of the jail. It is believed that it was then that Yost did most of his work.

Louis Meyer says that he frequently saw him peeping over a drawing. He never got close enough, however, to tell just what the prisoner was doing. One of the turnkeys said:

"For about a month I saw that he acted funny when I got around his work. He always had a big piece of paper in the front of him and a pencil in his hand, but when I got close the paper would disappear beneath a newspaper, and he would look at it with the pencil. No, I didn't know that he was working on a patent."—Courier-Journal.

Henry E. Jenkins, former Mayor of Bowling Green, died from illness caused by an overcast vegetable dinner. He was married only a few days before.

Outwitted by Pettigrew.

Former Senator Pettigrew has attracted attention anew, since his recent retirement from Congress, by his swift winning, according to the newspapers, of a quarter of a million dollars or so, through the friendly "tips" of one of the most prominent Wall Street operators. Mr. Pettigrew is a man who has made many enemies, but enemies and friends alike agree in admitting his picturesque personality.

He "worked his way Westward" in the strictest sense of that phrase. He was taken by his parents from Vermont to Wisconsin as a boy; and after he, by laboring hard out of hours and living cheaply, obtained a college education and a legal training, he pushed on by himself to Dakota with just seventeen dollars in his pocket.

The Territory was at that time new in need of men who worked with their brains and hands. He trusted to their brains alone and he entered his new home as a laborer attached to a Government surveying party. It did not take him long to discover that a harvest was coming to those who knew how to reap it from the rise in land values. He accordingly set up a real-estate agent, surveyor and conveyancer at Sioux Falls. Out of this business grew a profitable law practice, and an opening in politics soon offered itself, which led in due course to the Senate.

In Mr. Pettigrew's Western home they tell a story of him which illustrates his brain and his rarely failed in any task he had set himself.

He was once engaged in a land transaction in which a tangle arose, and he and a rival claimant were left on the same footing as to equities of the case, everything depended on who should make his filing first at the district land office.

Mr. Pettigrew boarded a train at once for the place where this office was situated; but he noticed, seated in one of the cars, a man who had some reputation thereabouts as a land agent, and whom he suspected of having been hired by his adversary to file on the land as he was.

When the train was within a few miles of the land office, Mr. Pettigrew hurried forward to the cab, and after a short conversation with the engineer induced him to slip the coupling that attached the tender to the first car.

The locomotive steamed into town and dropped its enterprising passenger; who ran to the land office and made his filing while the engine was backing down and connecting with the train which it had left standing in a cornfield. When the other man arrived he found that the formality of filing had just been completed.

How to Be Popular.
Contribute of your best to the pleasure of others. Study the character of each and sympathize with each in troubles or joys, however small, says Women's Life.

Be gentle in speech. Never retort with an angry word, remembering that the second word makes the quarrel.

Govern yourself, guard your temper, avoid moods and pety and selfishness.

Be unselfish; deny yourself and prefer others; readily pardon any seeming lack of attention.

Beware of the scandal monger, and shut your ear to what ought not to be repeated.

Cultivate cheerfulness and amiability. A smiling face chases away gloom. Say pleasant and kindly things when you have the opportunity.

Be not intolerant; agree to differ in opinion, and refuse to turn head in discussion.

Remember that your best friend is your mother, and have nothing to do with those who think otherwise.

Do not expect too much, but forbear and forgive. Do not charge a bad motive when a good one is conceivable.

Do not monopolize conversation or attention, and do not talk too much of your own affairs. There is a limit to people's interest in your concerns.

The Good Roads State Convention will be held in Louisville Thursday and Friday of this week.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals has adjourned for the Summer. The next meeting will be the 16th of September.

The Republican party is threatened with a split. The hull of this organization has struck the rocky rocks of protection.

Rev. Franklin H. Kerfoot, a noted Baptist Divine, died at Atlanta, Ga., last Saturday. His last work in Kentucky was at Louisville.

The Court of Appeals holds that the State Board of Health has no right to deprive O. W. Murphy, an osteopath of Bowling Green, of his license to practice medicine.

The Court of Appeals refuses to grant the petition of Caleb Powers' attorneys for a modification of its opinion reversing the verdict of the Scott Circuit Court.

Elkhorn Valley in the Pocahontas coal field district, West Virginia, was visited by a cloud-burst last Saturday night. Six hundred lives were lost and much property destroyed.

A few pie hunters are mentioning John W. Yerkes as the logical candidate for the Presidency. Dr. Deboe is in line of promotion, why not take him? He is a very good size man.

The Democrats who are seeking and desiring ways and means to bring victory to our party in its next National contest should make up their minds to support our party nominees.

The negro who murdered policeman Crum at Danville, several months ago, will have the Court of Appeals, having sustained the judgment of the lower court, Gov. Beckham will now fix the day for the execution.

The third party movement is a failure before starting. There are but two parties in this country—the Democratic and Republican. They will be the contending forces as long as trees grow.

In different sections of the South the negroes have a secret organization formed for the purpose of assassinating white people. The murdering of Foster, in Louisiana, developed the whole plan. A few weeks of the lawless hands have already been stretched, and it would result in good to the country if their white cousins were served likewise. In our judgment there has never been a band of marauding negroes that a white man was not the instigator of the organization.

Senator Jones, of Ark., Chair of the Democratic National Committee, has been in Washington. He talked freely of the political outlook, but said he wished it understood that he made no pretense of representing anybody but himself in the opinions expressed. He thinks that the next session of Congress will devote a great deal of time to the Philippine question with which the Supreme Court has said Congress alone has power to deal, and that out of the discussion will grow the principal issue of next year's Congressional campaign—"Ought the Constitution to follow the flag?" Senator Jones thinks the Democrats will take the stand that we should not control any people who are not considered good enough to enjoy all the rights and privileges of American citizens; that we should assist the Filipinos to set up an independent government, notify the powers that we will brook no interference with it, and then withdraw our flag from the Philippines, but he believes that a majority of Republicans will stand by the program of holding the islands for the money that can be made out of them. He said that the Democrats would fight the ship subsidy bill, which he expects to see pushed to the front again, just as hard as ever; that he doubted whether Baile's much talked of anti-tariff bill would ever get out of the House Ways and Means Committee, and rather expected the order of the transcontinental railroad houses, to another Nicaragua Canal Legislation, to be obeyed by the Republican leaders.

The merchants of the city of Georgetown will have, during the week of July the 22nd, their first Annual Mid-Summer Fair, Horse show and Carnival. The amusements and promotion under direction of the The Olympian Carnival and Oriental Exhibition Company. There are no doubts as to the entertaining features of the above and while it will require much money and heroic efforts it will doubtless redound to the good of its promoters and the welfare of Georgetown and Scott county.

The Democrats of Virginia should look at the condition of this State since we indulged in a heated fight among ourselves. The contest for nomination between Montague and Swanson is very spirited—it is bitter and in our judgment the former is the aggressor. The best thing that could happen to the party and the State would be to drop them both and give Mr. Eckles the nomination. He is the man of the three.

Dr. Clark, charged with murdering Miss Cora Walker, by a criminal operation, gets a new trial. The crime was committed at Sturgis, Union county, and the doctor was given ten years. It will be remembered that the young lady's sweetheart was with her in Clark's office and shot and killed himself immediately after the girl's death, falling across her body.

Fifteen persons comprise the Republican Committee of Henry county and ten of that number are postmasters. A trust has been formed by the aggregation for the purpose of ousting Mrs. Gertrude Sanders, who is postmaster at New Castle. Dr. Deboe is very much interested and wants J. P. Gray to supersede Mrs. Sanders.

The "Infant Industries" under the protection—how a policy have become so powerful that even many leading Republicans are alarmed and are open advocates of a change in the tariff laws under which they have prospered.

The corner stone for the new Masonic Temple was laid at Louisville last Monday with imposing ceremonies. Gov. Beckham and Grand Master McChord spoke, the latter delivering the oration.
